

— Low standards: the ultimate success killer

People who chronically struggle financially suffer from low standards. They almost always surround themselves with weak, semi-competent individuals who are greatly struggling themselves.

Your standards are what you choose to tolerate as normal, average and/or acceptable. This includes things, behaviors, results and people.

The things, behaviors, results and people a person chooses to tolerate in their immediate environment will tell you a lot about them.

What you tolerate in others/life you will tolerate in yourself.
