

— Going beyond listening, reading, and studying

Being content with insight is a killer.

It will drain the life right out of you if you stay there.

Most people aren't missing information.

They're missing courage, discipline, ambition, and authentic commitment.

In other words, they're missing life force.

And the reason they're missing life force is because they haven't created any.

Learning new information, no matter how practical the information, is a waste of time unless you can get it out of your head and into the world.

Endlessly studying new information without acting on what you learn is nothing more than a glorified Escape Card.

You have to create with what you learn.

Simply knowing about things and talking about things will end up in frustration.

You're a creator.

Go create.

— Dusan Djukich