

— Dealing with a weak life

There are two ways to revolutionize a weak life:

1. Hate something so much that you're willing to get off your ass and do whatever it takes to put an end to it.

If you only dislike something, you will only complain and whine about it.

Sincere hate inspires movement.

2. Love something so much that you will do whatever it takes to create and protect it.

Simply liking something usually leads to wanting it.

There is no power in merely wanting.

Liking, disliking, complaining, and wanting are all useless when it comes to actual creation.

Sincere love is a necessary required action generator.

Both love and hate work.

Both love and hate are great movement generators.

Both real love and real hate get things done.

The choice is up to you.

— Dusan Djukich