

— Disrupting a thriving life

“If it ain’t broke, don’t fix it” is a common utterance.

Most people interpret “disrupt” to mean “fix.”

Nothing could be further from the truth.

When you try to fix (read mess with) something that’s thriving you run the risk of causing serious problems.

Disruption is intentional and controlled.

It is accomplished by creating, owning, and inserting a poor, hungry, and driven inner stance into an already existing thriving life.

This will actually supercharge a currently successful creation.

Lennox Lewis once said, “Sometimes success needs interruption to regain focus and shake off complacency.”

Yes, it is possible to lose focus and go through the motions at an extremely high level.

And it’s a dangerous and potentially costly thing to do.

After all, who wants to be a bored, lethargic decamillionaire?

Staying poor, hungry, and driven will fortify your odds of continuing to thrive.

— Dusan Djukich